

BRITISH AMBASSADOR TO CHINA WOUNDED WHEN A JAPANESE ATTACKING AIRPLANE FIRES AT ENVOY'S CAR NEAR SHANGHAI

Sir Hughe Knatchbull Hugessen is Perhaps Mortally Wounded—Automobile Had Union Jack On the Radiator—Mistaken for Chinese Army Staff Car—Rushed to Hospital for Blood Transfusion.

(By M. C. Ford, I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

SHANGHAI, Aug. 26—Precipitating a situation unprecedented in diplomatic annals, Sir Hughe Knatchbull Hugessen, British Ambassador to China, was perhaps mortally wounded today by a machine gun bullet fired from an attacking Japanese airplane.

The incident occurred while the envoy, accompanied by two aides, was driving to Shanghai from Nanking in his official car.

Japanese officials expressed regret over the shooting and expressed that Sir Hugessen's automobile, which bore the Union Jack on the radiator, had been mistaken for a Chinese Army Staff car.

Sir Hugessen was rushed to the Country Hospital in Shanghai, where he underwent a blood transfusion. The bullet entered his stomach and penetrated the spinal column. His condition was too weak to permit operation for removal of the bullet.

The Chinese chauffeur who was driving the ambassadorial car, said the bullet was fired from a Japanese bombing plane, flying low over the Nanking-Shanghai road.

Sharp protests over the incident were anticipated. Japanese authorities said the gunner apparently was convinced the car carried high Chinese army commanders, but whether this would be satisfactory to London was problematical.

LONDON, Aug. 26—The British Government late this afternoon received an official notification that its Ambassador to China, Sir Hughe, was seriously wounded by a machine-gun bullet allegedly fired from a Japanese bombing plane.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden personally took the matter under advisement with immediate stiffening of the British attitude toward the Sino-Japanese conflict anticipated.

Mrs. Margaret M. Holden Dies After Short Illness

Mrs. Margaret M. Holden, wife of the late Thomas Holden, died in a Philadelphia hospital yesterday, following a short illness.

Mrs. Holden was a native of Ireland but came to the United States when a young girl and had resided in Bristol ever since coming to this country.

The survivors are seven daughters and three sons, Mrs. John Rogers, Mrs. Katherine Savage, Mrs. John Steinbrunn, John, Thomas, Fletcher, Bristol; Mrs. John Stewart, Mrs. John Jeffries, Philadelphia; Mrs. Frank Muth, Newportville; Mrs. Joseph Szathmary, Buffalo; three sisters; one brother; 42 grandchildren and eight great grandchildren.

Relatives and friends are invited to attend the funeral from her late residence, 341 Cleveland street, Saturday morning at nine o'clock with high requiem mass in St. Mark's church at 10 o'clock. Friends may call Friday evening.

To Arrest Two for Bruno Escape

Pottsville, Aug. 26—Warrants were out today for the arrest of two men, charged with assisting in the escape of Joseph J. Bruno, thrice convicted of first degree murder in the "Kelayres massacre."

The warrants were issued for Rocco Gormone, Hazelton, and Joshua Nilo, New York, at the request of Corporal Jacob Hess, of the Pennsylvania Motor Police and County Detective Louis D. Buono, of Schuylkill County, who arrested Bruno in New York last Sunday.

"There was nothing political in Bruno's escape," Buono declared upon making the request.

He charged Gormone and Nilo with operating the automobile in which Bruno escaped from Pottsville.

Insurgents Occupy Santander

Bilbao, Spain, Aug. 26—With a flourish of trumpets and the beating of drums, victorious Spanish insurgent troops today occupied the city of Santander, until yesterday the last Loyalist stronghold on the Bay of Biscay.

Lead by General Jose Davila, insurgent commander, whose victorious offensive broke the defense of Santander after weeks of effort, the rebels marched through the city and placed the Nationalist flag in the Municipal Square.

War weary bands of straggling Loyalists faced an unsuccessful attempt to stem the insurgent advance.

PLAN BIGGER WATER MAINS AT MORRISVILLE

Borough Council Considers Placing Eight-Inch Main
In Some Sections

PLAN FOR DEVELOPMENT

MORRISVILLE, Aug. 26—The borough will probably have an eight-inch water main laid on North Pennsylvania avenue, so as to take care of future development in the northern section of the borough and that district immediately adjacent to the borough. The matter has been discussed at a special meeting. The pipe would extend for a distance of 2,000 feet, from Walnut avenue to Arborale avenue.

While no official action was taken, the borough engineer was asked to look into the question of setting up the improvement as a WPA project.

The borough engineer was also instructed to make a survey of the westerly side of North Delmor avenue, between Union street and East Palmer street, with a view of determining the approved curb line so that Council and property owners may determine whether curbs shall be placed along this thoroughfare.

A new valve, costing $50, has been installed at the old standpipe on North Delmor avenue, and the old valve was ordered repaired in order that it may be ready for use should it be needed later. This standpipe is used to store water which is used to wash the filter beds.

The water main project on McKinley avenue was completed at a cost of $190 and work is now proceeding on the West Hendrickson avenue project, between Lafayette and Jefferson.

Now Here's the Situation

PLUMSTEADVILLE GRANGE DISCUSSES CONSTITUTION

Isaac S. Gross Comments In Glowing Terms About The Historic Document

OTHER COUNTY NEWS

"Our Constitution 150 Years Young" was the subject upon which Isaac S. Gross, a member of the Plumsteadville Grange, spoke at the Summer meeting of Upper Bucks Pomona Grange, No. 50, held in the hall of the Richmond Grange, near here.

Speaking before a large audience, Mr. Gross commented in glowing terms concerning the greatest of all documents in this country and in this connection he spoke of the broad vision of the men who drafted the Constitution, vision which he said looked far into the future for the welfare of generations yet unborn.

Continuing, Mr. Gross said: "So well was this manuscript planned that it has withstood the trials of the past century and a half and it is still the staff and stay of the loyal citizens of America."

A dastardly criminal assault on the nine-year-old daughter of a Bucks county farmer was admitted by mentally-defective Michael J. Rooney, 18, of 521 Sedgwick street, Philadelphia, in a statement made before Privates Felix R. Gowan and Walter L. Haman, of the Doylestown sub-station of Pennsylvania Motor Police.

Rooney laughed when he described the fiendish attack upon the helpless little girl, committed in a pig sty on the farm of Jacob Ankele, Bedminster township, near Bedminsterville, last May.

Miss Esther M. Gehman, of Harvey avenue, Doylestown, who is a member of the Quakertown School faculty, and Miss Frances Clemens, of Telford, who teaches school in Germantown, have returned from a seven weeks' jaunt to Europe, where they toured ten countries. At Venice their party caught a glimpse of the world's most famous married couple, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

The annual exhibition of handicraft by the children frequenting the Sellersville playground, was held at the play center with a large number of parents and friends of the children attending.

The articles exhibited, made under the supervision of the playground director, Miss Gertrude Bittle, included pot-lifter holders, pads for hot plates, miniature crepe gardens, paper bracelets, beaded bracelets, bean bags, stuffed dogs, beaded rings, book marks, etc.

The judges were: Rev. E. W. Andrews, Mrs. Walter E. Baum and Mrs. John V. Chapman, all of Sellersville. The winners were rewarded with ribbons. The outstanding winners were Leah Winer, Evelyn Fosbender.

Report Slight Change In Number On Relief

The changes in the direct relief rolls in Bucks County during the week ending August 14, reflected the static condition which has been apparent here since the beginning of June. At the end of the week there were 300 cases, consisting of 1,211 persons, carried on the rolls, as compared with a total of 297 cases, or 1,208 persons, at the end of the previous week. This represented a net weekly increase of only three cases. The inactivity of the case load over the past eleven weeks is shown in Table 1, where it may be noted that the present total is practically the same as the total carried two months ago.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Copyright, 1937, by The Baltimore Sun)

The Roosevelt-Lewis Rift

A GOOD DEAL HAS been written lately about the "rift" between the President and his C. I. O. ally and supporter, Mr. John L. Lewis. Very often these "rifts" or "breaches" or "breaks" between public men develop in political writing without much actual foundation. But this one appears to be real.

CERTAINLY MR. LEWIS no longer visits the White House with the frequency and informality of old. As a matter of fact, he has not been there at all for a long time. His place as chief labor consultant and adviser to the President seems to have been taken by Mr. Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and treasurer of the so-called Labor's Nonpartisan League. Mr. Hillman is also vice-president of the C. I. O. It is through Mr. Hillman that the President now deals with Mr. Lewis and through Mr. Hillman that Mr. Lewis now deals with the President. Their personal relations are concededly strained. Mr. Hillman, the friend of both, has become the liaison officer between the White House and the C. I. O.

IT IS A SITUATION which suits both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Lewis to minimize so far as possible for the simple reason that their past relations have been so close and their political interests are so linked that an open break would be mutually damaging. Certainly, it would spread confusion among their followings which, to a certain extent, are identical. Mr. Lewis claims a membership of 2,500,000 for his C. I. O. and claims, too, that in 1935 they all voted for Mr. Roosevelt—and that is probably true. In view of this, in view of the enclaves which each has passed upon the other; in view of their identification with the same "objectives"; in view of the extraordinary and unprecedented alliance which has existed between them—in view of these, and some other things—anything like an open break between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Lewis would seem politically inept, not to say stupid.

THEY WILL, it is held, avoid any overt manifestation, but the break is there nevertheless, and no better demonstration of the suppressed feeling could be given than in the public utterance of Mr. Lewis which appeared the day Congress adjourned. It was notable for three things—first, it was the only statement concerning legislative matters which Mr. Lewis has made in four years—and he has made many—which did not endorse the President's position and praise Mr. Roosevelt personally; second, in effect, it was a criticism not only of Congress and of the Democratic party for not fulfilling its 1936 pledges but of the Roosevelt leadership as inadequate and ineffectual; third, it carried the clear intimation that

3 NEW TEACHERS JOIN SCHOOL STAFF HERE FOR NEW TERM

Schools Will Open for New Term On Tuesday,
September 7th

HOLIDAYS ARE NAMED

Buildings Have Been Cleaned and Are in First-Class Condition

There will be three new teachers in the Bristol public schools this coming term.

Miss Doris Kline, graduate of Temple University, is going to teach the seventh grade at Jefferson avenue. Miss Kline formerly taught at Friends' Select School, Philadelphia, and holds a master's degree from Temple University.

Miss Evelyn Fabian, graduate of New Jersey College for Women, is going to teach English and Art in the eighth grades. Miss Fabian taught in the Bristol summer school this year.

Mr. Stephen Juenger, boys' coach and health instructor, was a member of the varsity track, basketball and football teams at Temple University. He was particularly outstanding as a basketball player with the Temple team. He has been employed as counselor at the Treasure Island Boy Scout Camp this summer.

Miss Elva Cruse, formerly second grade teacher in the Harriman building, is now supervisor of the teachers in grades one to three in the district.

The buildings are all in fine shape for the beginning of school. The boilers in the Harriman building have been completely overhauled and repaired. The installation of a new boiler is proposed for the Bath street building.

The school calendar calls for the opening of the schools on September 7th and the observance of Constitution Day on Friday, September 17th.

There will be 189 school days and the following holidays will be observed:

Constitution Day, Friday, September 17.

County Institute, Friday, October 29. Thanksgiving, November 26-28, dismissal at 12 noon, Wednesday, Nov. 24.

Christmas, schools close Thursday, December 23, at 3 p. m.

New Year's. Schools open Monday, January 3, 1938.

Washington's Birthday, schools close Tuesday, February 22.

Schoolmen's Week. Teachers attend Friday, April 1.

Easter vacation, schools close Wednesday, April 13, at 3 o'clock, and open Tuesday, April 19.

Memorial Day, Monday, May 30. Schools close Friday, June 17.

The Bristol public schools will open for the 1937-1938 term on Tuesday, September 7th. On this date, only those who are beginners in the first grade, those who are transferring to the Bristol schools from other schools, and those pupils from either Tullytown or Bristol Township who wish to enroll in the ninth grade of the high school will report for registration. For all other pupils the school sessions will begin Wednesday, September 8th, the grades starting at nine o'clock and the high school at 8.45.

Parents who wish their children to start in school in the first grade, should obtain a permit from a member of the school board. These permits will designate the building the child is to attend. On the first day the child attends school, he should bring the director's permit, together with a birth or baptismal certificate and a certificate of successful vaccination to school when he enrolls. These papers must be presented to the first grade teacher when the child reports to school.

The teaching staff will include: Bath Street School: Mrs. Carrie Loughborough, principal, and sixth grade teacher; Miss Minnie Rodrock, sixth grade; Miss Grace Haas, fifth grade; Miss Helen Fine, fourth grade; Miss Maude Connor, third grade; Miss Clara Lerman, second grade; Miss Violet Hildendorf, first and second grades; Miss Marjorie Sparks, first grade.

Wood Street School: Miss Bertha Hetherington, principal and fifth grade teacher; Miss Bertha Ruth, sixth grade; Miss Sarah Diehl, fourth grade; Miss Anna Foster, third grade; Miss Helen Keaton, second grade; Miss Clara King, first grade.

Washington Street School: Miss Jane Rogers, principal, and fifth grade teacher; Miss Mary Wilkinson, fifth grade; Miss Grace Shaver, fourth grade; Miss Clara Weideman, third grade.

Jefferson Avenue School: Mr. Walter Rosser, principal and seventh grade teacher; Miss E. Aileen Göttingha, seventh grade; Miss Gladys Rinard, seventh grade; Miss Claire Coles, seventh grade; Miss Doris Kline, seventh grade; Miss Christie Appleby, special grade; Miss Elizabeth Evans, special grade; Miss Jessie Mansell, third grade; Miss Irene Pales, second grade; Miss Alice Palmer, first grade. Harriman Building Grades: Miss Laura Ellis, principal and fourth grade teacher; Miss Katherine Beck, sixth grade; Miss Katharine Evans, sixth grade; Miss Rhoda Abbott, fifth grade; Miss Elizabeth Rishel, third and fourth grades; Miss Mabel Staley, third grade.

FOR FARLEY TO UNLEARN

Postmaster-General Farley is said to be considering an offer to become sales executive of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Corp., which is planning a come-back in the medium price motors field. The job would involve his resignation as postmaster-general but not as chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

The motor industry will welcome this accession to its ranks and, along with everyone else, will follow Big Jim's business career with keen interest. He has been in the contracting business on his own account but the Pierce-Arrow post, if it pans out, would be his first private job since he was elected town clerk of Stony Point, N. Y., in 1912. No one, however, will under-estimate the postmaster-general's abilities. He is an executive, an organizer and a promoter, too, as he amply has demonstrated since he made his appearance five years ago in national politics. The fundamental qualities required for business success are not so far different from those that make a big-time political organizer.

However, there will be some things that James will have to unlearn. It will seem strange to him to accommodate himself to the idea that the politics of Pierce-Arrow employees is a matter of indifference to the management. He will find it hard at first to appreciate that a Republican stenographer may be as able and energetic as a Democrat. And when it comes to salesmanship he will have to forget what he learned in disposing of those old campaign books at $250 apiece. The success of that feat was phenomenal but the method, if applied in private business, scarcely would find favor with the Federal Trade Commission.

LITERARY CRITICISM

Author Ernest Hemingway departs the strained atmosphere of a New York publisher's office for the comparative calm of Spain. It has been confirmed that the hair on Ernie's chest is not false, a matter in dispute between himself and Author Max Eastman; but the advice differs on whether Hemingway left his critic writhing on the ground or was himself assisted to his feet after the encounter.

We thought the old bullfighter might have overlooked what Max insists was no more than gentle railery. He should have considered Mr. Eastman's infirmity, which is a weakness for writing books on the anatomy of humor. He has written two, and it is fact well known to psychologists, we believe, that no one who attempts to dissect the sense of humor has one. Mr. Eastman's contributions are only part of a laug literature which bears out this view.

Authors are a thin-skinned tribe, even those who are under no compulsion to paste the contents of a mattress on their chests to affirm their virility. The harvest are the tenderest, which Mr. Eastman might have foreseen when he penned his satire on the hook-and-ladder novelists. Also, time and place are part of the essence of humor, a truth that humorists recognize but those who write about it should not be presumed to know. At any rate, the whole affair has been instructive and unfortunate, and having Hemingway in Spain and Eastman in New York is perhaps as good an arrangement as any.

For a little people, the Japanese certainly run to elbows in crowds.

TIMELY TESTED RECIPES

Peach Preserves

Peach marmalade, peach jam and peach jelly are well-known. Here is a delicious and colorful recipe for preserves, which can be made swiftly, even during the preparation of a meal.

Use equal parts of peaches, peeled and sliced and sugar. The original recipe calls for three bowls of peaches and three bowls of sugar, using a large-size bowl, in which eggs or cream might be beaten. When peaches and sugar are mixed, add one medium-sized bottle of Maraschino cherries, cut fine, and also add the red cherry juice. For a larger quantity of peaches and sugar, use more cherries. Boil until thick, pour into large jars and seal.

Plain Peach Marmalade

Peel and slice desired number of peaches—(twenty-four peaches should yield seven good sized jars). Grind one orange and one lemon, using rind and all of fruit. Measure fruit and add one generous cup of granulated sugar for each cup. Boil one to one and one-half hours, or until thick.

Pickled Peaches

Peel peaches and weigh. Allow two pounds of sugar to each four pounds of fruit. Combine one cup of vinegar and one cup of water in a saucepan. In a bag put one tablespoon of whole cloves and one tablespoon stick cinnamon. (Boiling spices in bag prevents discoloration of fruit.)

After the spices have boiled in the syrup of vinegar, water and sugar for 15 minutes, remove the bag and put in the fruit, left whole. Simmer until tender. Remove carefully and pack in jars, filling jars with hot syrup. Very small peaches may be used for pickling. They are delicious with meat.

Codfish Cakes

Codfish cakes are too often overlooked as an appetizing Summer food. They are delicious for any meal, including breakfast, the one necessity being that the fish should be thoroughly tender.

Try using a deep iron frying pan for French-frying the cakes in sizzling hot fat. The fat must be very hot and should be reheated between batches. A ready mixed codfish foundation is handy for vacationers.

One cup salt codfish, two and one-fourth cups mashed potatoes, one well-beaten egg, one tablespoon butter, pepper, chopped parsley.

Wash fish and cut in small pieces. Soak in lukewarm water several hours, or overnight. Heat to the boiling point and drain off water. Repeat, until the fish tastes fresh. This will remove the heavy salty flavor which many people object to in codfish.

Mix fish with remaining ingredients, beat well and drop by tablespoons into deep hot fat, heated to 355 degrees F. Fry until golden brown and serve garnished with parsley.

Baked Bananas

Baked bananas are a novelty with a baked banana. Bananas marinated with lemon juice and broiled or French-fried are familiar to many diners. They also are delicious when first dipped in batter.

Now try baking this fruit in the skins on the rack of a moderate oven, 375 degrees F. Bake 10 to 15 minutes, or until dark in color and soft to the touch. Bananas should be firm and not too ripe for this method. Serve in the skins with the meat.

Fruit Pudding

Two tablespoons butter, one cup sugar, three eggs, one cup milk, three cups flour, three teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one tablespoon lemon juice, four cups cherries, berries or other fruit.

Cream butter and sugar. Add eggs, sift flour with baking powder and salt. Add alternately with the milk to the sugar mixture. Add lemon juice and fruit. Pour into greased mold and steam for two hours. Serve hot with sauce.

Fruit sauce for pudding: Melt one-fourth cup butter and stir in one cup sugar. Beat an egg and add to it one cup of cream. Blend with butter and sugar mixture. Add one cup of desired fruit. Heat and serve at once. This also is a delicious sauce for cream puddings, such as tapioca, rice or cornstarch.

Cheese Custard in Tomato Cups

One-fourth pound sharp cheese, one-half cup milk, two eggs, four medium tomatoes, two tablespoons butter, one sliced onion, one bay leaf, salt and pepper to taste.

Grate cheese, add a little milk and blend to a smooth paste. Beat eggs, add rest of the milk, cheese and seasonings and beat until well mixed. Cut cores from tomatoes and scoop out all soft pulp. Set in casserole and pour cheese mixture into tomato cups. Melt butter in saucepan, add tomato pulp, sliced onion and bay leaf, and simmer until slightly reduced. Pour around tomato cups and bake in a slow oven, 325 degrees F. for one hour, or until custard is set. Serve hot. This should yield four generous servings.

Preserved Fruit

This recipe may be used with equal success for cherries, currants or huckleberries. It requires four pounds of fruit and four pounds of sugar.

Wash the fruit, remove the stems and stones, over with sugar and let stand two hours. Set on the stove and bring slowly to a boil, stirring occasionally. Cook until the fruit is tender. Fill hot jars and seal.

When preserving cherries by this method, a few pits cooked with the fruit will improve the flavor.

Cream of Lettuce Soup

Cut two medium sized onions and one stalk of celery in small pieces and braise in a covered saucepan, with a piece of butter for about 10 minutes. Add one-half cup flour and mix until smooth, cooking a few minutes longer.

Next add two quarts of boiling stock, beat until smooth and add two heads of cut-up lettuce, cooking slowly for three-quarters of an hour. Strain through a sieve and season to taste.

In the meantime, have a head of let-

"THE SILVER ROOD MYSTERY"

by Lewis Allen Browne

SYNOPSIS

Harlan Stevenson, a writer of crime mysteries, overhears Gerard Montith tell his niece, Mary, that unless she marries Dave Forrest, Stevenson's brother-in-law, he will leave her penniless. Montith possesses millions. Stevenson catches the name "Griswold," as being some man Mary thinks she wants. Later, Stevenson and his wife Sally, discuss the incident and arrive at the conclusion that Griswold is the nephew of Nate, Montith's superintendent.

CHAPTER II

Time always passes quickly of a summer afternoon at Rookwood. Some of us were playing contract, others were drifting about as it pleased them.

Wally Foxcroft came over to our table and looked about.

"Mary's not here?" He said it as a question.

"Haven't seen her in an hour, Wally."

I looked about. Dave was in the tennis court again, taking on both of the Townsend girls. Mary wasn't in sight.

Major Forrest, at the next table, leaned over to me "Did Gerard say he would be down, Harley?" he asked.

I explained about his headache and his plan to try and sleep it off and come down later.

"Wish he would hurry—we could make up another table then."

At five Mason and one of the house men came out with cocktails and some of those silly, paper-thin sandwiches. I saw Wally take a cocktail and walk off the terrace, calling cheerfully, "Come and get it."

He was talking to Mary who was coming across the lawn along the path that led from the stile.

They walked back together. I looked at Dave, coming from the court with the Townsend girls. He went over and joined Mary and Wally. All three seemed to be quite gay.

After all, a man has to be practical, and it occurred to me then that it would be too bad if Dave didn't get Mary, because all in good time the great Montith estate would go to her. Montith had a sister, possessed of twice the wealth he had. This sister, and his niece, were his only relatives.

Mason came out the side door to the terrace where we had the card tables, and made directly for my father-in-law, in the dignified, impassive manner that never left him.

"The telephone, sir," Mason said.

"Rother. Here, deal for me, Sally," he said to my wife, and followed Mason back into the house.

It didn't seem more than a second before I saw him at the door again, hurrying out to the table. I sensed that something was wrong.

"Sorry, you will have to re-arrange the players for a while, Sally. I can't be with you," he said.

He signalled me to come along and spoke to Dave.

We all three got inside when Dave, who had sharp eyes and, like myself, could see that something was wrong, asked, quietly, "What has happened, father?"

"Gerard Montith is dead!"

"What?" I exclaimed.

Dave, always more phlegmatic, asked, "Who says so?"

"His butler, just called me. He has sent for a doctor. Go out and bring Wally in, Dave."

"Wally?" Dave was puzzled.

"What can Wally do? Why shouldn't I be the one to tell Mary?"

"Because," Major Forrest said, with poorly suppressed excitement, "Wally is our county prosecutor, and Gerard Montith was murdered!"

When Major Forrest told Dave and myself that Gerard Montith had been murdered, Dave went out, without comment, to bring Wallace Foxcroft in.

"Did you get any particulars?" I asked.

"Not many. Davison says that he glanced out on the library porch to see if Montith was still sleeping, and saw that he had half fallen from the glider hammock. He went in to help him back and saw that he was bleeding from a wound in the chest and that he believed he was already dead. He—"

"Did you tell him not to touch anything?"

"I did."

"He said he feared Mr. Montith was dead, sir."

"Was that all?"

His eyebrows seemed to lift slightly as he looked at me. "That was all, sir."

I went with Dave to his mother and called my wife over, whispering to her what had happened.

"Harley!" she gasped.

"Keep calm, Sally."

"You were the last one to see him!"

"I was."

The Great Game of Politics

in the future the C. I. O. would function independently in politics rather than as a recognized part of the President's machine.

WHILE THE sensational nature of this Lewis statement was somewhat obscured by the excitement of adjournment, its significance was not missed by the closer observers and it seems worth while to present the point of view held by the adherents on both sides. Among Mr. Lewis' intimates the charge is made that Mr. Roosevelt "ran out on him." During the campaign, it is contended, Mr. Roosevelt took everything the C. I. O. had to give, including $700,000 in money and more than 2,000,000 votes, but when, after election, C. I. O. needed him most, he weakened. At the crucial moment for Mr. Lewis in the steel strike, he cut the ground from under him with his "a plague on both their houses" remark. In other words, the President went along with Mr. Lewis up to the moment it seemed to be hurting him and then he "went neutral."

—O—
THAT IS THEIR VIEW. The other side sees things differently. Mr. Lewis, the President's friends assert, has no ground for grievance against him at all. Mr. Roosevelt gave him all the support to which he was entitled. He permitted the free use of his name in the C. I. O. drive for membership. He made no protest against the capitalization of the Presidential prestige for C. I. O. purposes. He saved Mr. Lewis and the C. I. O. in the General Motors strike and he stayed silent on the sit-down issue at the cost to him of the friendship and sympathy of a good many real supporters. That was one of the things that alienated Mr. Garner, loosened his grip on the Senate generally, weakened him in his court fight.

—O—
HE WENT, it is asserted, a very long way, indeed, with Mr. Lewis—and is still with him politically—but when it developed that Mr. Lewis was unable to keep his agreements and control his own men a public sentiment arose which left the President no choice. His "a plague on both their houses" remark, under the circumstances, was the mildest thing he could have said, and it was essential to say something if the general hostility to the strike violence was not to engulf them both—and that would have been worse for Mr. Lewis than losing the strike and sustaining a temporary personal set-back.

—O—
BEHIND ALL THIS, however, is considerable personal feeling. There is really no secret about the fact that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Lewis do not esteem each other personally. No one was more impressed by the size of his victory last November than Mr. Roosevelt himself. He felt it was so momentous that he was under no obligations to anyone. That was not the Lewis notion at all. He felt and, in effect said, it all was the labor support and the labor money which made the Roosevelt victory possible. The President's resentment at being publicly reminded of his debt, while not openly displayed at the time, was none the less real. It has been smoldering ever since. And there is another thing—Mr. Lewis' manner in conference with him has never been as conciliatory or subservient as some others. There has always been a little too much independence about his talk and a trifle too much truculence in his tone. Both are entirely natural to the man but they do not personally endear him to Mr. Roosevelt. The mutuality of their political interests probably will keep the two men working together. It may even force them to heal the "rift" that now seems fairly wide. But no one thinks that personally they are ever going to love or trust each other again. That, at any rate, seems sure.

Veteran Producer Predicts Color Will Dominate Films

New Hollywood Era Prophecied by Wanger

By CLARK KINNAIRD

International Illustrated News Writer
NEW YORK—In just about 18 months, the world is going to be really color-conscious, and thereafter it will NOT be satisfied with anything in black and white.

The photoplay, the most powerful social force of our time, will make this so.

The prophecy is Walter Wanger's. The Hollywood producer believes that the trailers of 1939 will lead fans to screen fare entirely in color.

The rainbow rush has been prophesied before. Movies in tints are more than 25 years old. A few seasons ago, all major companies were producing four-color musicals and extravaganzas. As musicals dropped out of favor, color went with them. When "42nd Street" brought the renaissance of the screen musicals, they were in black and white. Only Disney could see gold and silver in color.

Then, "Jock" Whitney, with a financial interest in technicolor, promoted its revival in features by financing "Becky Sharp." United Artists was induced to do "The Garden of Allah," with Marlene Dietrich and Charles Boyer, in color, and Wanger produced "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," with Sylvia Sydney and Henry Fonda, in natural hues.

Stars Afraid of Color

The latter received only one favorable review in New York, Wanger remembers, but it got a reception elsewhere that surprised even Wanger.

"I knew we didn't have a masterpiece," he told the writer, "and I expected the worst. But throughout the country it played to record business. The exhibitors reported to us that audiences liked it because it was just the same as a trip outdoors."

Previous color pictures had been too static, too much concerned with indoor sets and costumes. Everything was subordinated to the color effects. "Lonesome Pine" had plenty of scenery, action and plot: it was first of all a movie, and as a result it was as much a milestone in color-picture production as "In Old Arizona," the first outdoor all-talking movie.

But the picture that is bringing the black and white movie era to an end, Wanger says, is "A Star Is Born," which has Janet Gaynor and Fredric March as stars.

Production scene

Walter Wanger

"This was the production that changed the attitude of the stars," he explained. "A year ago it was hard to get a big-name player to even take a test for a color production. They were afraid of color—afraid it would shorten their careers as stars."

"A Star Is Born" woke them up. They saw that instead of making stars look older, as they feared it would, color actually made them appear younger. Janet Gaynor gives the impression of being of school girl age, and you'd think Freddie March had been rejuvenated.

Technical Problems Numerous

"In my own new picture, 'Vogues of 1938,' color takes 15 years off Warner Baxter's appearance, and Joan Bennett never looked younger."

"Now all the older stars want roles in color productions."

"After seeing 'Vogues,' Sam

Goldwyn decided that all his future pictures must be in color.

"I agree with him: there is no more justification for keeping movies in black and white than there would be to make them silent."

"Producers would be abandoning black and white production immediately if sufficient equipment and technicians were available. Technicolor hasn't enough cameras, and there aren't enough technicians skilled in lighting a picture for color. That's the big problem in color production: lighting. Makeup, costumes and sets are minor factors by comparison."

Color production now is 25 percent more expensive than black and white—"Vogues of 1938" cost an estimated $1,300,000—but Wanger believes the differential will disappear as all companies swing over to color, and technicians can have more experience, and production speeds up.

ARRANGE THE HAIR TO SUIT FACE AND ALSO PERSONALITY

By Edna Stephany
Home Economics Representative

A mirror is your best friend when you are selecting a hat. This is also true when you arrange your hair, so why not take time to sit before it for a few minutes of serious experimenting.

A high forehead may be made to appear shorter if you comb your hair in a soft dip over the forehead or if you wear bangs.

If you have a thin narrow face, it will appear broader if you wear bangs or part your hair in the center and comb it out toward the sides, or if the hair is combed to expose the ears.

If your face is small, do not choose a large fluffy coiffure. The contrast between the size of your face and the large amount of hair framing the face will only make it more conspicuous.

The apparent width of your face can be decreased by arranging the hair to cover a part of the cheeks or by parting the hair on the side but near the center.

A heavy jaw can be made less noticeable by combing the hair so as to expose your forehead.

Short fat necks look shorter than ever with a long bob or with a broad knot on the neck. To make the neck appear longer and more slender, wear the hair high on the head or with a smooth short haircut.

Combing the hair severely back from the face will accent the profile. This will make a prominent nose even more conspicuous. To minimize the apparent size of the nose, comb the hair in a loose wave out over the forehead, wear a long bob, or a knot low on the back of the neck to give width below the level of the nose.

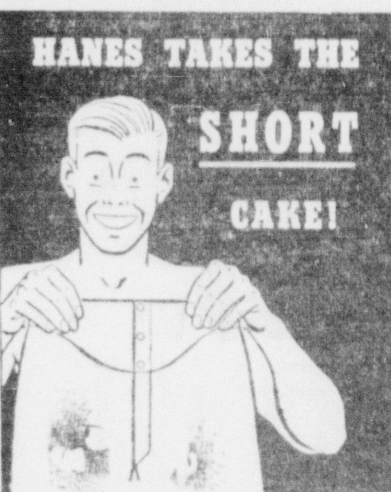

A becoming hair arrangement must not only suit your face, but also your figure and personality as well. If you take good care of your hair and arrange it becomingly, you will be making the most of its possibilities.

with a surprise ending to the men who universally disliked the towering crowns of last fall, but a year of experimenting with the new height crown presents a becoming hat for fall.

The majority of the high crowns will be brimless this autumn like the turban Joan Blondell wears in "Back in Circulation." This is golden brown velvet to go with a beige wool ensemble and is draped up to a height that would have made us gasp last year. The turban is worn tipped slightly to one side and is without ornament.

Related to the draped turban is the draped Russian hat which is also worn by Miss Blondell in the same picture. This is of navy wool fabric and is fashioned with flared width at top. It is attractive with a tailored dress suit.

Height is not always achieved by crown treatment this year since brims, too, have an upward movement. There is the 1900 type with its wide brim turned up abruptly on one side to bring the profile into bold relief. Schiaparelli is doing some of these for Mae West but they are too striking to become universal favorites.

A high brim manipulation that will please more people is the high-cuffed Breton. June Lang is wearing one of these in natural straw with the brim rising far above the crown. She does not wear it as far back on her head as the girls did this spring, since it has a subtly different shape.

The more fashionable berets are height-giving and molded to reveal the profile. They are something like the ones medieval artists wore except that they are deliberately slanted up on one side to add inches to a girl's height. Loretta Young has one of these in black velvet. The full beret is attached to a narrow band which fits solidly on the head and then Loretta arranges the beret proper to slant from a high line on one side to a low one on the other.

Some of the high crowned brimless hats will rise up to quite some height, then bend over slightly in front. Doris Weston has a soft navy felt which follows this pattern and is pierced across the front with a rhinestone arrow.

The truth is that regardless of what husbands and sweethearts have to say about the matter the death knell of the high-crowned hat has not yet been rung.

LINES OF WISDOM

Wax the linoleum on your table, as well as the floor covering. It should be thoroughly dry before a thin coat of floor wax is applied. Wash first with a mild soap and warm water, wipe dry and wait one-half hour before applying wax. Cement the heavy linoleum on the table for a firm covering.

Racks of rubber-covered wire will hold different sizes of plates, as well as assorted saucenap covers. The racks come in all sizes and shapes to fit different types of cupboard shelves.

Pour left-over cereal into small cups or any form of mold, which first has been rinsed out in cold water. Store in the refrigerator for a quick luncheon dish. The cereal "jells" quickly, and may be unmolded, sliced, dipped in flour or crumbs and browned in fat. Honey or syrup will recommend this dish to the children.

Many green grocers are handling a half muskmelon-half honeyball melon, that is delicious in flavor and not so high in price as to make it a luxury. It is shipped in from California and is called "globo de oro" (circle of gold). This is its first year on the market.

For several weeks the little fishing boats with a pulp built out over the bowsprit have indicated that swordfishermen are busy and that excellent swordfish are in season. Although frozen swordfish (much of it from Japan) is usually splendid in quality, buyers are cautioned against mistaking frozen fish for fresh.

When a steak is cut from a frozen swordfish, water will ooze out; when a steak is cut from fresh swordfish, blood oozes out.

To separate peas of different qualities, some American canning factories use a brine solution of a density which allows tender peas to float and harder ones to sink.

Use psychology in serving greens to grown-ups and children. Let such dishes as spinach, beet tops or dandelion greens commend themselves by their dainty serving, ample use of butter or decoration of rice, hard-boiled egg, rather than ordering the family to eat greens because they contain needed minerals and vitamins. This admonition is certain to prompt an instant dislike in the minds of prospective greens-eaters.

"A chicken in every pot" might well be a consumer expectation this year, with cold storage poultry holdings totaling 40,000,000 pounds, about 50 per cent more than they amounted to last Summer at this time. Freshly-killed poultry also abounds at low prices.

If you like the flavor of onions, sprinkle your broilers with sliced or chopped onions, after they are placed in a dripping pan. Rub generously first with butter and season with salt and pepper.

Cook in a 400 to 425 degree oven until tender, about three-quarters of an hour, basting occasionally with the hot fat.

Try toasting thin slices of your favorite cheese on squares of bread, with a sprinkling of catsup. Toast directly under the broiler. Add a rash of bacon if desired.

Don't overlook the addition of grated horseradish in sandwich, toast or cracker spreads. A delicious mixture is made by mincing a few stalks of celery, mixed with creamed butter, grated horseradish and chili sauce, or catsup.

"Sweet Potato" yellow looks good enough to eat, although it is the name for the popular new shade in late Summer and early Fall clothes.

Broilers should average at least one and one-half pounds apiece to serve two people adequately.

Fresh ways with iced drinks are always in demand. Add a little grated orange and lemon rind to iced tea for a delicate flavor. Instead of adding mint at the last moment, when serving, try putting a few chopped mint leaves in the tea when it is steeping.

PEACH MUFFINS

Two cups flour, four teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, three tablespoons sugar, one egg, one cup chopped peach slices and juice, four tablespoons melted shortening.

Sift flour, baking powder, salt and sugar together. Beat egg, add peaches and shortening. Blend with dry ingredients, stirring only enough to dampen them. Bake in greased muffin tins, filled only two-thirds full, in hot oven, 425 degrees F., for 15 to 20 minutes. This recipe should yield 12 muffins.

Berries or other fruit may be substituted for peaches.

CHOCOLATE SYRUP

Chocolate syrup is a useful item to have on hand at any time of year, for it may be stored in a sealed jar in the refrigerator. Use it to flavor drinks for children or grown-ups and as a sauce for puddings and ice cream.

One-half cup cocoa, two cups sugar, two tablespoons corn syrup, one cup cold water, one-eighth teaspoon salt, two teaspoons vanilla.

PERFECT SHOOTING

CLARKSBURG, W. Va. — (INS) — There's no doubt to it that farmersportsman Henry W. Bassel rates his position as president of the Harrison County Rod and Gun Club. During a recent skeet-shoot match, Bassel broke 25 clay pigeons with 25 shots. It was the first time in the history of the Willow Beach range that the feat was accomplished.

ALL-AROUND LICENSE

city engineer N. A. Carle claims he possesses the most comprehensive license of any man in the state.

He is authorized to practice as a mechanical, electrical, civil or hydraulic engineer.

He also is an experienced mining engineer, but there wasn't room for that one on the license.

SUNDAY JAIL SENTENCE

SALEM, O. — (INS) — Lyman Sommers, 23, of nearby North Georgetown, and Louis B. Dorsey, 29, of Youngstown, were given jail sentences of 30 days each, plus a fine of $100 and costs for driving while intoxicated. However, they won't get out of Salem City jail until the day after Christmas.

Mayor George Harroff granted their requests that they serve their time only on Sundays.

FARR IS SEEN AS POPOVER FOR JOE

By Davis J. Walsh
(I. N. S. Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Aug. 26—(INS)—Six months ago, the man was one of those serio-comic figures of the ring who meant practically nothing to practically everybody, except maybe his nearest-of-kin. Today, by some singular quirk of fate which often enough becomes almost commonplace in the gaudy, giddy world of sport, he's on the eve of fighting Joe Louis for the world's heavyweight championship; specifically, tonight, at the Yankee Stadium.

That's the vivid, staccato story of Thomas George Paul Farr, of Great Britain, who has come up out of the mines at Tonypandy, Wales—to what? Probably a swift, unerring punch on the nostril.

Louis will be 6-1 in the betting on the night of the fight, and should be. In fact, the only angle of this fifteen-round event, palpably arranged to baffle Herr Schmeling, that seems worthy of being called unusual is that Farr is the first Briton to get into the same ring with a world's heavyweight champion since that far-off day at Chantilly when Charley Mitchell fought John L. Sullivan.

It will be Louis' first defense of the title since his knockout of James J. Braddock in June, but the colored man's management has no thought that this fact will be of especial significance. They picked this party from a distance of 3,000 miles with the idea of giving their fighter a little something to do—at a minimum of exertion; also financial reward. The fight probably won't do better than $150,000 at the gate.

In case I've failed to make myself clear, I like Louis by a knockout. In fact, I fully intend to keep on liking Louis until such time as he steps in there again with Schmeling, which may be never. In the meantime, he ought to be able to take a dozen Farris and stretch them out like a length of stair carpet.

Still, nobody has done that yet, at least not for the record books. Farr, who used to play the county fair dodge in the British hinterland by meeting all comers, says he has started more than 200 times—and has always finished. In the official records, he has made 71 fights, winning 35 decisions, getting seven draws, losing 10 and winning 19 by a knockout.

The best thing he did along that line was to stop Walter Nussel, the German. Otherwise, he has been no better than ordinary against men who are no better than fair. Max Baer, competitively lauded long ago bled a decision to Farr in London earlier in the summer. The elderly Loughran did the same, although eye-witnesses said that he was given the old grapple hook on that one. Another American of dubious merit, Mr. Bob Olin, twice had Farr down among the splinters.

All told, he's supposed to be one of those "cuties" who mussy and mingle with marked zeal, but he does seem to get clipped with great frequency. The fact is that he carries his shoulder high and his guard low, a style that went out with the old Marquis of Queensberry fighters.

He, therefore, should be easy to hit. And anybody that Louis hits is practically a fungo to the outfield.

One cup water, one-half cup sugar, one quart grape juice, one quart ginger ale, juice of two lemons, juice of five oranges.

Dissolve sugar in the water and bring to the boiling point. Cool and add to the other ingredients. Pour over cracked ice. Serve in tall glasses, garnished with a sprig of mint or lemon slice.

LOUIS LIKELY TO REIGN LONGER THAN ANY OTHER CHAMP SINCE SULLIVAN

By Lawton Currier
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Aug. 26—(INS)—Joe Louis probably will reign longer as heavyweight champion than any fighter since John L. Sullivan's day—unless Max Schmeling can do what no other heavyweight title-holder has ever done. That is, regain the championship.

The Brown Bomber figures to breeze through his first defense against Tommy Farr here tonight, and after that Schmeling—for the time being, anyhow—will be the only challenger left. Because he did it once, the German must be given a chance to knock Louis out again, or to take a decision. If he can't or doesn't dethrone the 23-year-old negro the current reign should stretch through seven or eight years, and perhaps longer. I'm assuming all the time that he will belt Farr out.

This takes no account of the young heavyweights who will be coming along during the next few years to make passes at Louis. But in that connection, if Louis can get by Schmeling in a return match, and prove that he had an off night before or still was too green at the time, then the supposition must be that he is as great as many have believed him to be from the start.

The Bomber might even tie Sullivan's championship tenure which lasted a decade from the time he was given official recognition after knocking out Paddy Ryan in 1882 until Jim Corbett took the title in 1892.

The next longest reign was Jim Jeffries' seven years after he knocked out Bob Fitzsimmons, who previously had knocked out Corbett. Jack Johnson later equalled Jeffries' seven years and still later Jack Dempsey came along to make it a three-way tie. Dempsey was the last of the monarchs to hold the throne for more than a couple of years.

Starting with Sullivan, first of the champions under modern rules, here are the fights in which the title changed hands:

John L. Sullivan knocked out Paddy Ryan, nine rounds, 1882; Jim Corbett knocked out Sullivan, 21 rounds, 1892; Bob Fitzsimmons knocked out Corbett, 14 rounds, 1897; Jim Jeffries knocked out Fitzsimmons, 11 rounds, 1899; Tommy Burns outpointed Marvin Hart, 20 rounds, 1906, succeeding Jeffries, who had retired undefeated; Jack Johnson knocked out (technically) Tommy Burns, 14 rounds, 1908; Jesse Willard knocked out Johnson, 26 rounds, 1915; Jack Dempsey knocked out (technically) Willard, three rounds, 1919; Gene Tunney outpointed Dempsey, 10 rounds, 1926; Max Schmeling won on foul from Jack Sharkey, four rounds, 1930, succeeding Tunney who had retired undefeated; Sharkey outpointed Schmeling, 15 rounds, 1932; Prima Carnera knocked out Sharkey, 6 rounds, 1933; Max Baer knocked out (technically) Carnera, 11 rounds, 1934; Jim Braddock outpointed Baer, 15 rounds, 1935; Joe Louis knocked out Braddock, eight rounds, 1937.
